

Room 1

Room 1 students are not only finding different ways to recognize the letters in their name, but they are also exploring new art activities from our new curriculum kits.

One of our local and upcoming artist Leo is getting in the fall spirit as he draws different fall-like pictures completely by free-hand! (His mom, Alexis, was Grandma Jana's first ever student!)

Room 2

Numbers, shapes and letters are part of almost every activity that we do at school. AJ and Gus are counting out beans to spell their names while Arev and Ruby are doing two different activities that emphasize categorizing shapes and spatial awareness.

"My name has only two letters!" Says AJ.

"I need a small triangle and a big triangle!" Says Arev.

Room 3

Stacking block towers and categorizing ladybug dots takes focus and determination. Here we have Justin and Carter working very hard at the task at hand.

"You have to do it slowly and be very careful," says Justin as he reaches the top.

Working on our writing skills is an important part of our learning. Here we have Christopher and Deklyn strengthening their writing skills by drawing vertically and writing horizontally.

Room 4

Maggie uses the butterfly template to categorize the butterflies by color.

"Red goes on red!" says Maggie.

Braxton works on his fine motor skills as he explores with buttons on a shirt.

Open-ended activities are essential in discovering not just the current skills of the children, but also their interests. Activities like big paper drawings allowed us to see what colors the children like to use the most as well as encourage them to utilize their gross motor skills as they were able to stretch their bodies to draw and color.

Great Discussion Books

Some of our favorite topics to talk about during circle time include: the importance of being yourself, the diversity of our families and the importance of talking about our feelings with those who care about us. We are introducing 4 new books this month that the teachers will take turns reading to their students. They are:

Ruby Finds a Worry. By Tom Percival

All are Welcome by Alexandra Penfold and Suzanne Kaufman

Be You! By Peter H. Reynolds

Red. A Crayon's Story

By Michael Hall.
